AN EYE WITNESS.

Following is an extract from the speech of Dr. T. E. Staton, a Canadian sergeant doctor, made in Evansville Wednesday:

"The atrocities of the Germans that I saw are so terrible, that I want to kill them, to exterminate that foul race from the earth. You may not have believed what you read, but the very worst tales have never reached your ears. The filthy disease that we have sometimes in the army and try to cure in our men, and if it is not we discharge the men, does not interfere with a soldier or an officer in the German army. This filthy disease was transmitted to as many women in Belgium as possible, and then when the woman's breast was torn out, the oncoming Germans knew that she was infected. There are hundreds and hundreds of 14-year-old Belgian and French mothers whose babies who are in no ways to blame that they have a German father. I have held on my knee a seven and a five year old orphan with hands chopped off by German fiends.

"The German is taught to hate and to kill. I have seen one when helped back to life by a Tommy or a French soldier spit in his face. One dying soldier gave a severely wounded German his water bottle. After he had quenched his burning thirst he threw the bottle as far out of reach of the weak Frenchman as possible.

"They hate even after death. One time we had captured thirty-seven soldiers with their commander. While they were waiting to be examined our good Major Steward stepped forward to give the German commander a cigarette which he took sullenly. Our major lit his cigarette for him then while he was being searched, he shot the major.

"Let's shoot the whole damn bunch, boys," I said. We lined up those thirty-seven Huns and killed every one. And in the last breath of that German officer he calmly puffed cigarette smoke."

NOTED INDIANA EDITOR.

Vincennes, Ind., Aug. 7.—Royal E. Purcell, age 69, owner and editor of the Vincennes Sun and one of the best known democratic editors and politicians in Indiana, died at his home here today after an extended illness. He was stricken with apoplexy four years ago in Indianapolis while attending a meeting of the Indiana Democratic Editorial association, of which he served as president for a number of years. Mr. Purcell served several terms as state senator, was trustee on Honover college, Purdue university and Vincennes university.

Since Mr. Purcell has been an invalid the Vincennes Sun has been conducted by his youngest son, George Purcell. The Sun is reputed to be the oldest newspaper in Indiana.

The Clown Prince is raising a laugh everywhere outside of Berlin by talking about another offensive that will advance like a rubber ball advances when thrown against a brick wall.

The British seem to have caught the idea from the Americans.

Now let's all pull together and wipe out the salient made in March.

FOLK WILL LIKELY WIN BY 35,000.

St. Louis, Aug. 7.—Unofficial incomplete returns from the state received here tonight indicate the plurality of Joseph W. Folk over Senator Xenophon P. Wilfley for the democratic nomination for United States Senator will exceed the 35,000 mark and that Seldon P. Spencer's majority over Col. Jay L. Torrey for the Republican nomination will reach 30,000 votes.

Congressman J. W. Hamlin of the Seventh district today conceded his defeat by 300 votes, according to a report received here. This makes a total of three congressmen defeated for re-nomination. The other two were Congressman Shackelford of the Eighth district and Bourland of the Fifth district.

BRITISH SWEEPING ON BIG SALIENT CRUMBLES

PANIC STRICKEN HUNS FLYING PELL MELL EVERYWHERE

Whole German Line From Rheims to The Sea is in Danger.

(By Associated Press.)

The historic battle ground between Amiens and Montdidier again is the scene of a mighty contest, with the French and British this time the aggressors. In the first day's battle they have penetrated the German position deeply over a front of more than twenty miles, from near Braches to near Morlancourt.

Following short but intensive artillery preparation the allied attack completely surprised the Germans who fled pell mell almost everywhere. The allied objectives were reached in remarkably quick time. The advance is continuing. Wherever the Germans offered any resistance they were quickly defeated.

Thousands of Germans were captured and large numbers of guns were taken. A score or more of villages were recaptured. In addition the enemy suffered heavy casualties. The allied gains extended two to five miles deep and seven and a half miles near the center of the line. Fighting extended as far north as Morlancourt to the Albert sector, but the official details as to results are unknown.

The allies' advance has taken them over two railroad lines serving to supply German forces.

Well out of the plains, pressing forward with seemingly great rapidity, the present offensive gives promise of menacing the entire German line from the sea to Rheims. If the drive should penetrate any great distance eastward, it probably will make a stand by the German crown prince impracticable even along the heights north of the Aisne river.

Under pressure the offensive menace to channel ports also seems to vanish for the present. Already to the north where the Bavarian crown prince Rupprecht had formed men for a drive it appears a backward move is not improbable. With his imperial cousin in trouble on the Vesle his own position is not comfortable.

Along the Vesle but little fighting occurred Thursday.

Found Out in Berlin.

Berlin via Germany.—The English have forced their way into the German positions between the Ancre and Avre, according to a statement issued this evening by the German war office.

STEAMERS SUNK.

New York, Aug. 8.—Information that the American steamship Merak, 3,224 tons gross, was sunk by a German submarine off Cape Hatteras on Tuesday night, was received today in marine insurance circles here. One small boat containing eighteen members of the crew is still unaccounted for.

The captain and twenty-three members of the crew have been landed at Norfolk and the rest of the crew is at Elizabeth, N. C.

German submarines operating off the French coast on August 3 sank the small American steamship Lake Portage and the British steamer Berwin. A belated official report announced here today told of the sinkings without details. The Lake Portage, of 1,998 gross tons, was built last year at Duluth, Minn.

VOLUNTEERS MUST WAIT ON WAR BILL

Washington, Aug. 8.—Voluntary enlistments in the army and navy were completely suspended today to prevent the disruption of industry pending a disposition of the bill proposing an extension of draft ages. Secretaries Baker and Daniels issued orders directing no enlistments until further notice. The admittance of civilian officers to training camps was also stopped.

McADOO FOR WAR PROFIT TAX

SHALL WE BE MORE PARTIAL TO THOSE AT HOME THAN OUR FIGHTERS? ASKS SECRETARY.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—William G. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury, tonight declared himself unreservedly in favor of flat war profits tax of 80 per cent. "The adoption of an 80 per cent. war profits tax should render unnecessary and I believe undesirable any increase in the existing excess profits tax rate," he declared.

In presenting his view on the question now before congress, Secretary McAdoo addressed the following telegram to Claude Kitchin, chairman of the ways and means committee of the house of representatives.

"Roper has advised me of his talk with you Wednesday last. I greatly appreciate assurance you gave him of your desire to meet as far as possible the views of the treasury. I should be very sorry to have progress in revenue bill delayed for conference concerning war profits tax as I understand you suggest. This is a matter which has engaged my earnest thought and in order that you may know my views without delay, I take the liberty of telegraphing to confirm and re-endorse the program outlined in my letter to you of June 5 and to express the conviction that that program is sound and reasonable. I earnestly hope that it may commend itself to you and the committee. I regard the war profits tax as an integral and indispensable part of that program.

"As a result of the further consideration of the subject which has been given since I wrote you, I am confirmed in my opinion that a flat war profits tax of 80 per cent should be imposed. Of course ample safeguards should be provided against hardships in extraordinary cases in the application of such a rate.

"The adoption of an 80 per cent war profits tax should render unnecessary and I believe undesirable any increase in the existing excess profits tax rate.

"It is my strong conviction that the taxation of genuine war profits is the only way to reach real war profiteering and that it is at the same time a thoroughly justifiable measure upon economic grounds as well as a certain and indispensable producer of a large part of the required revenue.

"The patriotic producers of America should be content if one-fifth of their war profits are secured to them, especially when we reflect that men are fighting and dying in France to save the liberties of those who stay at home and to make it possible for

"RAN TO IT LIKE FEAST"

GEN. MANGIN SAYS AMERICANS "MAGNIFICENT DASH UPSET THE ENEMY."

(By Associated Press.)

With the American Army in France, Aug. 7.—Gen. Mangin, who was in direct command of the allied forces in the drive against the German right flank south of Soissons, has issued the following order of the day, thanking the American troops for their brilliant participation in the battle line which caused the German retreat between the Marne and the Aisne:

"Officers, non-commissioned officers, the soldiers of the third army corps: Shoulder to shoulder with your French comrades, threw yourselves into the counter offensive begun on July 18. You ran to it, like going to a feast. Your magnificent dash upset and surprised the enemy and your indomitable tenacity stopped counter attacks by his fresh divisions. You have shown yourselves to be worthy sons of your great country and have gained the admiration of your brothers in arms.

"Ninety-one cannon, 7,200 prisoners, immense booty and ten kilometers of reconquered territory are your share of the trophies of this victory. Besides this, you have acquired a feeling of your superiority over the barbarian enemy, against whom the children of Liberty are fighting. To attack him is to vanquish him.

"American comrades, I am grateful to you for the blood you generously spilled on the soil of my country. I am proud of having commanded you during such splendid days and to have fought with you for the deliverance of the world."

Red Cross Distributions for a Month.

"Paris today is merely a way-station where the Red Cross furnishes medical care, food, clothing, shelter and transportation. In seventy-two departments of the interior, the Red Cross is supplying relief to refugees, including more or less permanent installation of families in new homes. All organizations, including Government agencies, are co-operating in this work, the Red Cross supplying the greater part of the food and clothing needed, and at many points taking command of the situation.

"An idea of the amount of merchandise thus distributed can be gained from a message from Major Perkins recently received. For one month it included 156,000 articles of clothing, 20,000 pairs of shoes, 18,000 pieces of furniture, 13,000 kitchen utensils, 50,000 pieces of bedding, 15,000 kilos of condensed milk, and great quantities of other food-stuffs. Some eighty-three thousand people were thus directly helped."

DRILLING SUSPENDED.

With the mercury soaring around 118 on the parade grounds at Camp Sherman, 166 soldiers were prostrated by the heat. There were no fatalities, but because of the extreme hot weather Maj. Gen. Hale has ordered all drilling suspended until cooler weather.

them to continue in business.

"Should we be more partial and tender to those who are protected in safety at home than we are to those who makes the supreme sacrifice for us on the field of battle?"

"I sincerely trust also that amendments which experience has shown to be desirable, if not essential, to the provisions affecting the determination of excess profits taxes may be adopted."

WASHINGTON, AUG. 8.—THE SLOPE TO THE VALLEY OF THE AVRE HAS BEEN CARRIED BY THE ALLIES, WHO HAVE REACHED THE PLATEAU BEYOND. THEY ARE MAKING FURTHER PROGRESS, OVERCOMING EVERY OBSTACLE ALONG THE LINE EVERYWHERE.

WATCH THE FUR FLY.

Washington, Aug. 8.—American troops, brigaded with the British, are in action in the great new British offensive before Amiens. Until their identity is disclosed by General Pershing, however, officials here will not say what units are there.

On July 4, Gen. March stated that the 33d division, made up of Illinois troops, was in action on the Picardy front. Since then, however, army officers say that they have been returned to Gen. Pershing's direct command.

Today's offensive is designed, army officers say, to remove a serious menace from the British front. The Germans have been concentrating their forces in great strength at Amiens and it is believed here that the purpose of the present drive is to shove them back there and compel a general retirement along the northern front.

It is assumed here that the withdrawal of reserves from all along the Picardy front to save the crown prince's army in its retreat from the Soissons-Rheims salient has weakened the German forces sufficiently to make another allied success possible. Some army officers here today, however, were inclined to believe Marshal Foch and Haig had discovered evidences that the Germans were planning an attack to lift the pressure on the Vesle line and had "simply beaten them to it."

The allied offensive which was opened opposite Amiens today is the seventh drive of the year. The first five were launched by the Germans, the last two by the allies. The dates and places follow:

German offensives: March 21, Picardy; April 9, Flanders; May 27, Isonne-Marne front; June 9, Noyon-Montdidier front; July 16, Marne-Champagne front.

Allied drives: July 18, Aisne-Marne rout; Aug. 8, Picardy.

On Fifteen Mile Front.

London, Aug. 8.—Field Marshal Haig's statement concerning the new Franco-British offensive, shows the enemy lines have been driven in about seven and a half miles in the center at Pleassier. It shows good gains have been made on the fifteen mile stretch, lying between Pleassier and Morlancourt. The statement says no estimate is possible of prisoners, guns and material captured, but several thousand prisoners and many guns were taken.

Attack Continues.

Paris, Aug. 8.—The attack made this morning by our troops south of Amiens in conjunction with British troops continues in good order. The official communication this evening says: "Details given in British Communication."

AN AUGUST CONCEPTION.

Samuel Taylor Coleridge poet and essayist, writing some 75 years ago, said:

"The possible destiny of the United States of America as a Nation of a hundred million of free men, stretching from under the laws of Alfred and speaking the language of Shakespeare and Milton is an august conception."

The United States is now a Nation of a hundred million and more, stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and reaching out east takes in Hawaii and the Philippines, in the north Alaska, and in the south the Panama Canal. But grander than its physical is its moral greatness. Its fairness and justice, its courage and power, its maintenance of right and freedom cover the world.

The destiny the United States is now fulfilling is a more august conception than even the imagination of the author of Kubla Khan conceived of less than a century ago.

CONFERENCE HELD TO BRING ABOUT CONCERT OF ACTION.

Wednesday was a busy day for all the local exemption boards in this district. The district board was in session at Princeton and representatives of all the local boards were on hand. Many things of importance were brought up, but the main reason for the meeting was to discuss the methods of classifying the drafted men now being used by the different boards. In the past each local board has used its own discretion in classifying men under different conditions.

At the meeting Wednesday every contingency was discussed and Judge Yost, chairman of the district board, will send out special sets of instructions to each local board so that the classification and exemption throughout all of this district shall, in the future, be uniform.

Those representing the local board of Hopkinsville were: C. R. Clark, Pettus White, Dr. J. H. Rice and Mrs. Lillian Gillock.

byville, Ky., are visiting Mr. H. P.

UNIFORM EX-AMINATION'S

Camp Sherman, O., Aug. 7.—Uniform standards of physical examination governing the entrance to the national army, for use of local and medical advisory boards under the selective service regulations, have been issued by the war department and copies have been received here.

Adherence to the new rules and regulations by local boards will result it is expected, in uniform examinations, and should prevent men physically disqualified for military service being sent to Camp Sherman. At the same time, the new standards will enable local physicians to make examinations with a better understanding of the needs of the army and will clear away misconceptions and misunderstandings resultant of the sending of men to Camp Sherman who heretofore were rejected.

Explicit instructions are given as to what classes of men may be accepted for limited service as well as what classes may be accepted pending treatment for remediable defects.

The experience of the past year has enabled the medical authorities to establish standards, which will relieve the local boards of considerable doubt as to just what decisions to make in unusual cases.

Heretofore the physical standards of the three armies have differed, and instances have been noted where men who have been rejected for service in the regular army have been accepted for military service by draft standards and this will not be possible unless the disqualifying defect be subsequently removed.

The rule now is that to make a good soldier a man must be able to see well, have comparatively good hearing, his heart must be able to stand the stress of physical exertion, he must be intelligent enough to understand and execute military maneuvers, obey commands and protect himself, and must be able to transport himself by walking as exigencies may demand. The only exceptions made to the foregoing general rule are in the case of men accepted for special and limited service.

FAMOUS ACTS FOR FAIR HIPPODROME

The great $150,000 Pavilion at the Kentucky State Fair, in Louisville, will be the scene each night of a monster amusement revue preceding the $10,000 Horse Show, which will be one of the paramount features of the cele-

This feature of the Fair's entertainment has grown from year to year, until it has developed into one of the most enjoyable and important attractions of the entire exhibit, and one which vies with the great Horse Show as a popular interest.

The attractions announced for the State Fair make an imposing roster.
In addition to Thavli's great band of forty skilled musicians in military uniforms, the soloists of international fame and the bevy of wonderful ballet dancers accompanying his organization, who will give two concerts and includes the picturesque "girl act" billed as "Freddie's 1918 Bicycle Won-not mean the throwing away of life,

what I mean by sacrifice is that when

WOMEN AS WORKERS

HOW SOME SOUTHERN WOMEN ARE SERVING THEIR COUNTRY.

Ten white women of Ringgold, La., went into the cotton fields near that town, chopped 17 acres of cotton and turned over the money to the Red Cross. Community women's organizations in Georgia have asked that the opening of schools be deferred so that children may help pick the cotton crop endangered by the scarcity of farm help. These instances of the part women and children are taking in handling the South's big crop, were described at the Department of Agriculture's recent farm labor conference in Birmingham, Ala.

The wife of one of Christian county's leading farmers, a lady of brilliant intellect, highly educated and noted for her culture and leadership in literary movements, drove a binder two days during the wheat harvest on her husband's farm in this county. She did this not because it was absolutely necessary, but to set an example of one way in which an American woman can help to win the war.

"The Fog"

By LOUISE OLIVER

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

An east wind was blowing when the Bardsleys awoke on Monday morning. Also they had had a few friends in to a late supper Sunday night, at which Mrs. Bardsley had concocted one of her famous rabbits. It was rich and cheesy, and Mr. Bardsley had had two servings in spite of the doctor's orders about a light diet.

No, of course, when Mrs. Bardsley asked him at the breakfast table for an increase in her weekly allowance, it was not strange that her husband should growl out an unfeeling refusal, adding that there was one other sure thing besides taxation and death, and that was a woman's inability to be satisfied.

Now, Mrs. Bardsley had felt her request so justified since Katie had automatically added a dollar a week to her own wages, the laundryman unashamed, charged her twice as much for her husband's shirts, and every one from the garbage man to the gas company was politely and delicately picking her pocket, that instead of weakly and miserably crying about his refusal she became angry—in fact, she got mad clear through for the first time almost since their marriage.

"Look here, Thomas!" she said crisply, biting off each word with a snap that made her husband jump. "Will you tell me why you married me?"

"I give up," he retorted. "Phonographs are cheaper and they occasionally say something pleasant."

"If you can't give me enough to live in peace and comfort without having to worry my head off all the time about money?" she finished, ignoring his interruption.

"Well, Lord knows I'm not made of money. I've had to dig down in my jeans for so many things lately I'm nearly strapped all the time. If you tried you could manage differently."

"How?"

"That's up to you. I'd let Katie go."

"And do my own work?"

"Wouldn't kill you, would it?"

"Thomas Bardsley, I never did a day's work in my life!"

"Then it's time you were benedicting by my admirable example and beginning."

Mrs. Bardsley rose from the table, her eyes flashing dangerously. "Very well, Thomas, I'll do my own work."

Her head on his shoulder.

But that doesn't include anybody else, remember. Where shall I send your things—to the club or a hotel, or would you prefer to go back to your mother's?"

"Oh, send them to the devil," thundered Mr. Bardsley, jumping for his hat and pushing for the door.

"I will," called Mrs. Bardsley after him. "I just wanted to know his address."

Mr. Bardsley proceeded to his office, the east wind and shades of Welsh rabbits following. Things went wrong all day. His stenographer irritated him beyond endurance by refusing to be a mind reader and understanding what he meant to say instead of what he did say when she took dictation.

The typewriter seemed to tap incessantly on raw nerve ends, and every time the telephone rang he jumped as though a shell had hit him. The east wind had brought more trouble in its wake also, besides irritated nerves and domestic discord. Since ten o'clock the air had thickened and condensed until, mixed with the smoke from mills and furnaces, a heavy, impenetrable fog, first cousin to a regular Londoner, had settled down over the city. It penetrated buildings, hallways and offices until Mr. Bardsley could scarcely see his own desk.

The result of eye strain, nerve strain and indigestion produced slowly but surely the worst headache Mr. Bardsley had ever had in his life. He would have sworn that the fog was joined to pull up stakes for home, if there was one thing Lillian knew how to do it was to cure a headache. She was a born nurse. As he locked up his desk and gave a few curt directions for the next day, visions of hot water bottles, cold cloths with ice, a quiet, darkened room and a certain specific of which his wife knew the secret, floated before his eyes. Then later a hot, delicious broth, and Lillian's smooth, quiet voice reading the evening papers.

Out on the street he groped his way to the curb to call a taxicab. He was surprised at the density of the fog. He could hear people quite near walking and talking, but could see no one.

Then he discovered that no taxis were running. Of course, nothing on wheels would venture out in that black destruction through which no light could penetrate more than a foot or two.

In some remarkable way he got to a subway station, and finally, after a few minutes, reached his own station and street, and proceeded as before to feel his way blindly to his own house.

He hung to familiar iron railings, followed walls and groped along hedges until at last he felt the rough bricks of his own house. Blindly he stumbled up the steps, turned the key in the lock and pushed open the front door.

A hollow void suddenly seemed to start up and fairly strike him in the face. Although the fog had penetrated inside, he could still see clearly enough to know that the hall and adjoining rooms were empty. Carpets, hangings, furniture and all were gone. His own breath sounded like thunder in that vast, empty solitude, and his footsteps like the explosion of artillery. He shivered miserably. It dawned on him by degrees that Lillian had meant what she said when she asked where to send his things. She certainly had lost no time. Then he went to his club.

All day long Mrs. Bardsley had tried to keep up the white fires of her indignation, but failed miserably as the afternoon wore on. She had a presentiment that Thomas would come home with one of his headaches. Two servings of rabbit always did it. Poor man! Away off working his head off in an old stuffy office on such a day with a headache. When she had a headache she could lie down! It was true, all he said. He did have it harder than she did. She would take his advice, give Katie a week's notice to quit and do her own work. Then she hunted up his dressing gown and slippers, pounded up the pillows on the sitting room lounge, and got things ready generally.

But six o'clock came, half-past, seven o'clock, eight, then nine. At last it dawned on Mrs. Bardsley that Thomas had taken her at her word and gone somewhere else.

Her indignation returned. Well, if he felt that way about it, he could go. Surely he knew her well enough not to take her too seriously when she said things. It merely served him for an excuse.

A week passed. One evening Mr. Bardsley could not resist a longing to see the old place where he had been so happy. It was a soft, starlit evening late in May, and a sort of halmweh gripped him. There had been no word from Lillian in all those weary days, and, not desiring a public scandal, he had made no efforts to locate her.

Ah! There was a light in the window. Some one had moved in then—a happy family, no doubt, as his had once been.

He paused, his head on a level with the window. He could not resist a look within. There—at the same table, beneath the same old light, in the same old chair, sat Lillian sewing.

"Of course, it was the fog, dear," remarked Mrs. Bardsley later when, her head still on Mr. Bardsley's shoulder, they were trying to piece together their Chinese puzzle of experiences. "You must have passed our house and gone to the Smiths. They moved out several weeks ago. I told you, but you'd forgotten."

It all goes to show that rabbits are bad at night and London fogs bad in the daytime, but quick tempers are bad things altogether.

Champagne for the Trenches.

Champagne is served out to the French army twice a year—on the national fête day on July 14 and at Christmas, one bottle to every four men. The brands and vintages are not remarkable, but it unquestionably flazes. And even at $1.25 a bottle the bill is a heavy one, so it has occurred to certain taxpayers to direct attention to the enormous stocks of German-owned champagne maturing in the Reims cellars.

It has been suggested to distribute it among the army, which would please the pollus and reduce Hun competition with French brands after the war.

DECREASE IN DRINKING

KINGDOM WILL NEVER ABANDON LIQUOR RESTRICTIONS CAUSED BY WAR, SAYS D'ABERNON.

London, Aug. 7.—The gain in national efficiency as a result of the war time liquor restrictions is such that it is certain Great Britain will never return to pre-war conditions in this regard, according to a statement made to the Associated Press today by Baron d'Abernon, chairman of the central board of control which has dealt with the drink problem. Baron d'Abernon said:

"The regulations limiting the dilution of spirits and beer and forbidding of sale, providing for the bidding treating, have resulted in remarkable decreases in drunkenness and the disease incidental to drinking. There has been a general decrease of about 83 per cent in drinking among both men and women.

"The progress of improvement has been so rapid and continuous that the government is fully satisfied and no further restriction are contemplated. The reduction in intemperance has been larger in this country during the period since the restrictions went into effect than is shown anywhere else in the world. The policy has been not to attack the liquor trade, but the inefficiency caused by alcoholic excesses."

WHEAT AND FLOUR SWAP

IS EXPLAINED BY PROF. KOFFMAN, THE CHRISTIAN CO. FOOD ADMINISTRATOR.

The following bulletin has been issued to all millers in the states of Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina:

A great many farmers will bring you wheat and want to exchange it for flour. It has been ruled that you may handle this exchange business under the following regulation:

"When the farmer brings to the miller wheat grown by himself, the miller may deliver to him on an exchange basis sufficient amount of flour without substitutes to provide twelve pounds per month for each person in his household or establishment until October 1, 1918, providing that the farmer signs the following certificate and that the miller has reasonable cause to believe the truth thereof.

Certificate to be signed by the farmer exchanging wheat for flour:

I, hereby certify that the wheat this day delivered by me to at was grown by me on my farm, that the amount of flour to be delivered to me, together with that already on hand, will not give me a supply more than sufficient to meet the requirements of my household or establishment under the regulations of the United States Food Administration and that I will not sell, lend or deliver such flour to anyone, nor permit such flour to be used for any purpose, except human consumption in my household or establishment.

Signature and address. NOTE.—Pleased be advised that this does not in any way change the present rules for sales of flour by either the merchant or miller. No person can purchase more than a thirty days supply based on six pounds per person. Not over twenty-four pounds can be sold to a town customer and not over forty-eight to a country customer. The change of ration of twelve pounds per person in stead of six provides only for the farmer who brings in his home grown 1918 wheat.

GROVER C. KOFFMAN,
County Food Administrator.

You are required to call at the County Assessor's office at once and give in your list of property for taxes, for we cannot list everybody the last day. Every single summer hat bears its lowest price now—lower than any of the season. There's considerable wearing time now for these models, but even though you wear one a few weeks only, your purchase will be decidedly economical.

This is without doubt the supreme millinery bargain event of the season, and an unparalleled opportunity for you to make a supremely large saving. Especially do we call your attention to our White Milan Sailors in all shapes, $ 6.00 and $7.00 hats, now retailing for these two days at $3.98.
